18 stay-in workers killed in Butuan fire

By Leila B. Salaverria and TJ Burgonia

COMMISSIONER Conchita Corpuz Morales will take the witness stand in the impeachment trial of Chief Justice Renato Corona and will disclose all that is necessary about her request for him to answer allegations that complaintains about his alleged $10 million in foreign currency accounts.

Asked if the $10-million figure came from the complainants, Morales told the media to wait for her testimony before the Senate.

Morales, a former colleague of Corona in the Supreme Court, yesterday told reporters that she would hand the Senate's subpoena to appear as the trial.

BUTUAN CITY—A fire at a three-story clothing store here early Wednesday killed 18 employees, most of whom were women who were asleep and trapped on the top floor.

The fire broke out at 3:30 a.m. and raged for five hours. Firefighters and police searching the garment building found 37 bodies, city police chief Roldo Ubaldo said.

Store employee Mylene Tulo, who escaped with two coworkers, said the fire started in the

"HE HAS REACHED a point of no return. If he gets convicted, he would gladly accept it. If he gets acquitted, that will be a blessing from God."

Asked if the Chief Justice was prepared to bare all and answer the allegations thrust at him, even the rumors about his purported extramarital affairs, Espinoza replied, "Yes."

In a meeting with his lawyers on Tuesday morning, embattled Chief Justice Renato Corona talked about how he had decided to cross the Rubicon and testify in his impeachment trial after an emotional meeting with his wife, Cristina, and daughter Carla Corona-Castillo.

"The Chief Justice asked for a minute for him to talk with Carla and his wife. We just left them in one room. After that, he met with us in a bigger room," said Renato Espinoza of the number gathering in the law office of one of the counsels.

"Before he told us of his decision, we were a little bit anxious because we didn't know what he wanted to tell us. But we felt relieved when he finally announced his decision," Espinoza told the Inquirer.

Carla cried, and Espinoza, "out of joy for her father." "She has to remember that he had his (Senators) happen question a few years ago. He's not really in the best of health because he's regularly taking his medications," the lawyer said.

IN VIEW of inaccurate information on the issue of whether or not the US is prepared to respond to its commitments to the Philippines under the Philippines-US Mutual Defense Treaty, the Department of Foreign Affairs would like to establish as a matter of record that:

1. The Philippines and the United States entered into a Mutual Defense Treaty (MDT) on August 30, 1951, in Washington, D.C.

2. As stated in the MDT's preamble, both the Philippines and the US desire to publicly declare, through the MDT, their sense of unity and common deter-

TOBACCO SIN TAX REFORM

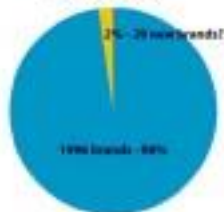

Exposing the Lies and Hypocrisy – Part I

Several opponents of the Aquino Administration's efforts to reform the existing tobacco excise system have consistently distorted the truth in an attempt to deceive and mislead the policymakers and the general public. In doing so, they peddle lies and adopt hypocritical tactics in order to keep the protection and profits they enjoy under the prevailing excise system.

Lie #1: The current excise tax system does not stifle competition since 29 new brands have entered the market since 1997.

The Truth: This is a blatant example of intellectual dishonesty on the part of those against excise tax reform. Indeed, new brands have attempted to enter the market since 1997 but none of these brands have been successful in gaining market share because they are penalized by higher tax rates than competitive old "1996" brands. The barrier to entry is nowhere more evident than in the fact that 1996 brands, all beneficiaries of the "classification protection" in the current system, control 98% of the market!

Cigarette Brand Volume Share 2011
Total Philippines*

*Source: Nielsen & IQV Inc.

Lie # 2: Sin Tax Reform will favour imported brands over local brands, or big players over small players.

The Truth: This is a detestable attempt to sow false fear among tobacco farmers and industry workers. Both the existing law and the pending reform bills in Congress do not make a distinction between imported brands or local brands, let alone big companies or small companies. What the reform bills seek to correct is the advantage enjoyed by "old" brands over "new" brands, regardless of whether the new brands are local or imported.

To illustrate the inequity of the current system:

	Year introduced	Production Location	Retail Price	Excise rate per pack
 BRAND X	1996	 Philippines	Php 18.00	Php 2.72
 BRAND Y	2012	 Philippines	Php 18.00	Php 28.30

*"Brand Y" needs to face a competitive excise rate as the "1996" brand Brand X

THIS SYSTEM OF TAXATION PROTECTS THE OLD PLAYERS FROM ANY NEW COMPETITION, WHETHER IMPORTED OR LOCALLY MANUFACTURED. IT WORKS WELL FOR A MONOPOLY BUT NOT FOR THE GOVERNMENT WHICH LOSES BILLIONS IN FOREGONE REVENUES; THE INDUSTRY STAKEHOLDERS ESPECIALLY TOBACCO FARMERS WHO ARE DENIED ADDITIONAL POTENTIAL BUYERS; AND THE GENERAL PUBLIC WHO ARE DEPRIVED THE BENEFITS OF OPEN MARKET COMPETITION.

IT IS VERY CLEAR WHAT SOME OPPONENTS OF EXCISE REFORM AND ITS SUPPORTERS CARE ABOUT. IT IS NOT THE HEALTH OF THE FILIPINO NATION OR ECONOMY, NEITHER THE PRINCIPLES OF AN OPEN AND FREE MARKET. IT IS NOTHING MORE THAN PROTECTING THEIR FAT WALLETS.

STOP THE LIES AND THE HYPOCRISY! END THE MONOPOLY IN THE PHILIPPINE CIGARETTE INDUSTRY! SUPPORT THE AQUINO ADMINISTRATION'S TOBACCO EXCISE REFORM PROGRAM!

Bukidnon's Pulangi power plant back on stream

By Betty R. Martin

THE AUTHORITIES, Power Corp. (Dagupan) has finally completed the rehabilitation of the Palang TV hydroelectric power plant in Bukidnon, a move seen to finally ease the rotating power shortages that have been plaguing Mindanao since the beginning of the year.

This means that the Pelangi II can now generate as much as 250 megawatts during the evening peak hours; the station's power generation cost is a maximum.

Before the repair work was done, the hydro-power facility was generating only 70 MW during the off-peak period and a maximum of 140 MW during peak hours, one of its original installed capacity of 233 MW.

Suprenant said the $7.11 million rehabilitation was completed at least May 5, or nine days ahead of the original target date of May 17, thus ensuring prospects that the tight power supply situation in Milwaukee

 The defense's last card in the trial of a man accused of murdering a woman was played Tuesday as the judge allowed the defense to call a witness to the stand. The witness, a woman who had been in a relationship with the accused, testified that she had seen the accused on the night of the murder. The defense argued that the witness's testimony was unreliable and that the accused was innocent. The prosecution, however, argued that the witness's testimony was credible and that the accused was guilty. The trial is expected to continue for several more days.

Prosecution
 The prosecution's case against the accused is based on several pieces of evidence, including the witness's testimony. The prosecution argues that the witness saw the accused on the night of the murder and that the accused was the only person who could have committed the crime. The prosecution also argues that the accused had a motive to kill the woman. The defense, on the other hand, argues that the witness's testimony is unreliable and that the accused was innocent. The defense also argues that the prosecution has not proven its case beyond a reasonable doubt.

Defense
 The defense's strategy is to cast doubt on the witness's testimony and to argue that the accused is innocent. The defense argues that the witness has a history of lying and that her testimony is therefore unreliable. The defense also argues that the accused was not even in the area at the time of the murder. The defense's goal is to create a reasonable doubt in the jury's mind. The judge will eventually decide whether to allow the defense to call the witness to the stand.

Witness
 The witness, a woman who had been in a relationship with the accused, testified that she had seen the accused on the night of the murder. She said that she saw the accused walking towards the crime scene and that she saw him enter the building. She also said that she saw the accused talking to another person who was also in the building. The witness's testimony is crucial to the prosecution's case. The defense, however, argues that the witness's testimony is unreliable and that the accused is innocent. The trial is expected to continue for several more days.

Mangyan folk want to be counted, too

By Maelys Rosales
Bureau Chief, Occidental Mindoro

ALIAN CARAGLAN passed her second high school on a certificate of live birth in the municipal government in the locality of Barangay Bato and Poblacion in Aklan de Bag town in Occidental Mindoro.

"My son told me that I'm now 60 years old," she said.

Caraglan, a Mangyan of the sub-tribe Ilong, did not learn to read or write. She was one of some 100 Mangyan people who came to register on March 20 in response to the "Count Every Child" campaign of the government. The Ilongs said:

No, even the Ilong elders, along with their children, were present to be counted. But they said to receive documents from the civil registry office.

Caraglan's daughter Yhgie, who managed to work Grade 2, said she finally has a document to show that she was born on March 20, 1951.

According to the Philippine Planning and Development Office (PPDO), Aklan de Bag, where mangroves are in "matters worse," has a population of around 30,000 although majority of the Mangyan population is around 28,726 as of 2010. Around 11,000 or 39 percent of them are Ilongs who also means "Ilonga" being in the tribe's language, the IFFCO said.

Formerly a small settlement founded by religious missionaries in the early part of the 17th century, Aklan de Bag is a second-class municipality (annual income: P10 million) with a total area of 72,000 hectares. On the eastern side of the town is the popular tourist destination Purok Gato.

Mayor Rey Caraglan described the town as a "big dead" for the Mangyan people, saying that most of them—born Ilongs—did not learn to read or write.

Plus, Philippines, the co-sponsor of the International government's activities in part of the worldwide celebration of the group's 71st year, 1940 aims to promote their rights and lift them out of poverty.

Caraglan said it was difficult for them who came to the town center for the main migration. "The kids from their upland villages to the population usually takes two days. They usually would suffer for that," he said.

Maelys Rosales, communications officer of the Philippine Planning and Development Office, said that Mangyan people would help protect children against various forms of abuse such as child marriage, underage military service and child labor.

Luffyne Serrano, technical officer of the Alian Mangyan registers her birth at a civil registry office in Aklan de Bag town in Occidental Mindoro during the 71st anniversary of the Ilongs.

child protection unit of the Occidental Mindoro, said the Mangyan people were "among the most vulnerable" of these groups being included for "counting."

She cited the case of a 15-year-old Mangyan girl of the sub-tribe Ilonga—whom she called "Tina"—in "quarantine" from Mangyan town in the northeastern part of the province, who did not have a birth certificate.

Three years ago, she said, the girl was recruited by a relative to work as a maid in Manila. "The employer was harsh and left marks on her skin through countless slaps and a stick," she said.

The girl, who did not know how to read or write, was also deprived of food and denied her salary. She said. A relative, who was also working in a maid, was also evasive.

Last year, the student Mangyan said, she wrote to a community worker with the Ilong, found a way to bring her home when she went to Manila to take the board exam for teachers.

The police officer reported her family and given livelihood assistance by the NPO through a program that would prevent her from being "exploited" again in Manila in other jobs.

The Philippine Ilong registration activity on March 20 attracted around 3,000 Mangyan people, including those coming from areas outside Aklan de Bag, Hattori said.

So far, 2,800 Mangyan people have had their birth registered, according to Philippine de Records, management and registration, who cited records from the office of Mangyan Affairs of the local government.

For those living in fishing communities, the civil registry office will register registration every Feb. 27 when it observes Civil Registration Month.

In Occidental Mindoro, the province because it would be difficult for the municipality to do the birth registration alone because of its land isolation.

Records said "there is no exact date to identify the exact number of unregistered Mangyans." The indigenous people are able to transfer their dwellings to other sites.

To determine their year of birth, the residents with the Mangyan registration in Aklan de Bag said. "Like if a Mangyan was born in the year when the volcano erupted, referring to Pinatubo, the year 1991, or when Pinatubo erupted via fire during the rise of the Japanese, that is in the 1940s," she said.

"I want them, not have to ask, 'Bungang-mat?' 'There may have something wrong?' in asking for their age," she said.

According to her, even a master camp among the Ilong Mangyan, who because of poverty are "not used to receiving their birthdate."

Now is said the village resident Dato, Jose de Rodriguez said "Mangyan people" because it would be difficult to find, the main source of livelihood for a Mangyan people who usually live in the forest hills.

A child is technically to reach the age of 15 because under a modern view, parents are, teachers, students and other professionals, doctors and nurses accept, she said.

THERE is nothing wrong with cooking. There is also nothing wrong with being a farmer."

Isabel C. Mijang, a 19-year-old daughter of a local technology graduate from the University of the Philippines Los Baños (UPLB) in Laguna, says she will continue to be a farmer.

Mijang, 19, was the first female to graduate among the 1,744 graduates during the UPLB 40th graduation held on April 20 at the D. L. Upland Franchise Park, the school's new campus in Laguna.

Harvey V. Rodriguez, who completed a master's degree in agriculture, said he is proud of his daughter. He said he is proud of his daughter, who completed a master's degree in agriculture, said he is proud of his daughter.

The country needs "education of the people" who will develop agriculture and ensure the growth of a rich economy," she said.

Mijang finished her high school education at the private Calabanga Institute in a school scholarship. But the year after, it was clear that her parents could no longer support her through college.

In 2001, she finished a scholarship to study at UPLB. The first semester, she worked as a student assistant in one of the university's offices. During summer, she would take manual jobs in Calabanga to make extra money.

Mijang said her family was "living just fine" until about two years ago when her father asked her to stop working in Calabanga and to stop working in the summer.

"The working situation was when he was hit by another truck," she said.

Logging roads tear into Luzon forests

By Gabriel Canlas

DIAGUAN CITY—The government's ill-equipped, understaffed forest protectors are suffering the consequences of their cat-and-mouse game with illegal loggers in the mountains separating Manobo town in Benguet and Sta. Cruz town in Zambales.

On April 26, a team of foresters and army soldiers led by Brigadier General, continued to monitor and patrol the mountain in the dead of night to pursue suspected illegal loggers.

"It was late afternoon that day when we observed a trail going after dark toward a cave," he said. "According to our information, there were 20 people with chainsaws in the group and a bulldozer," he said.

"The heavily armed soldiers were not able to find the group after four hours of searching," he said. "They discovered the following day that the loggers had the most sophisticated equipment to open a new road into the forest, right under their noses."

Building their own roads has become the tactic taken by illegal loggers to evade a military crackdown in Benguet-Manobo.

In Benguet, where a 15-kilometer stretch of the 24-km Manobo-San Jose Road is located, General said:

"The loggers' new tactic leads to more forest clearing, including an old logging road that illegal operators used. All the small routes connect to a main road along the mountain."

"I think they wanted to pursue a suggested area that is located in the mountain side of the mountain between the Benguet-Manobo area," he said.

According to the website of the Department of Environment and Natural Resources (DENR), Benguet-Manobo Forest, the region forest area adjoining Benguet and Zambales is about 23,328 hectares. About 25 percent (5,832 ha) is in Benguet, while 17,496 ha is in Zambales.

DBM claims faster budget disbursements

Abad urges government agencies to 'optimize' use

By Rowell M. Domingo

ABOUT seven-tenths of this year's national budget has been released as of mid-April, says Budget Secretary Florencio B. Abad, said agencies must use the funds to ensure that expenditures would improve.

Abad said yesterday 99.2 percent or P2,36 trillion of the P2,350-billion budget for 2011 has been disbursed well before the middle of the year.

"Nevertheless, [the funds] must be fully expended, especially by the agencies that have already received them," he said. "Otherwise, the government's overall expenditure performance suffers despite the releases already made."

Of the amount already dis-bursed, P196.2 billion has been released to all government departments, comprising 92.9 percent of the P210.5-billion budget allocated to them.

Abad said the 99.8 percent of the P223.21-billion budget for salaries of national government employees have been released.

Likewise with the budget for maintenance and other operating expenditures, with 98.3 percent or P218.22 billion of the P222.74-billion budget already used.

On the other hand, less than three-quarters of capital outlays have been released, with only P232.6 billion of the P298.4-billion budget released as of April.

Further, Abad noted that P10.9 billion or 14.4 percent of special programs funds have been given out to cover the temporary benefits and retirement gratuity benefits of retiring government employees. He also noted salary increases under the Salary Standardization Law, and the salary adjustment of government-owned or controlled corporations.

However, under automatic appropriation, lower allocations reached 37.3 percent or P405.2 billion in seven selected programs allocated for the full year, interest payments and set-aside expenditures for the first quarter, and retirement and life insurance payments.

"We explain all government disbursements not just to make the most of the releases, but also to make documents and expenditures that may be needed for the release of other funds," Abad said.

At least P61 billion for government disbursements are still allocated, and agencies must ensure their funds and they submit their special budget requests and other documents for requirements in the DBM, he added.

BSP eager to boost regional securities trading

By Michael V. Flores

THE BANGKOK-based BSP is keen on helping boost the growth of securities trading within Southeast Asia, seeing it as one way to help the Philippines and its neighbors achieve economic growth—that is, one that is based on poverty reduction.

BSP Deputy Governor Dean Guingco said that banks in Southeast Asia agree on the need to have direct and cross-border capital markets, as these would help achieve the goal of allowing the benefits of economic growth to trickle down to the grassroots.

Guingco said that by allowing investors to easily buy and sell securities from any country within the region, capital markets of Southeast Asian countries will become more liquid and, therefore, able to provide more resources to finance investments and development projects. Consequently, he said, economic growth rates in the region would increase.

Guingco said that one way to help achieve growth in the Philippines is to promote its growth rate, which has averaged just over 5 percent over the past decade. "We told the Philippines needs to grow by 7 percent every year even to ensure economic growth and reduce poverty in the long run," he said. "We need a significant increase in investment, which is the main source of growth of more than 5 percent, and we need to ensure that the capital markets will help increase funding resources."

"A deep and developed capital market can address the issue of savings and ensure smooth and efficient movement of capital funds, and in the process support more economic activities," Guingco added.

The BSP official said several bank officials have recently belonged to the Association of Southeast Asian Nations and work together to pursue the plan of integrating by 2015 Asia's financial systems, such as by opening rules on portfolio investment to allow more cross-border trading of securities.

The agreement was signed to implement measures that will make their economic growth "inclusive."

The Asian Development Bank, during the 46th annual meeting of its board of governors held in Manila, stressed that while Asian countries have consistently posted strong economic growth rates over the years, except for China, which the Philippines, are not able to transfer economic growth into more poverty reduction.

NGCP invests P355M to stabilize Luzon grid

By Amy R. Risco

THE NATIONAL Grid Corp. of the Philippines is investing P355 million to increase the expansion of South Luzon Transmission, to ensure the efficient, reliable and reliable delivery of electricity within Luzon.

In a statement, the NGCP said the installation of additional equipment is expected to increase the "operational capability" of the substation and at the same time, help meet increasing electricity requirements.

Included to be completed within the third quarter of this year, the Ngla substation expansion project involved the installation of six additional 100-megawatt transformers, nine units of 220-kilovolt and three units of 69-kV power circuit breakers and substation accessories.

The project is under NGCP's Luzon Substation Expansion I, which included the upgrade projects for Ngla and its other sub-stations in South Luzon. The Green Substation Expansion Project is aimed at accommodating the expected increase in load, or power supply that will run through NGCP's transmission assets in some of the main power projects start commercial operations.

These projects will be partly funded under a portion of the P34.3-billion capital expenditure budget set by the NGCP for 2011-2012.

NGCP is a privately owned corporation in charge of operating, maintaining, and developing the country's power grid and electrically superhighways, transport infrastructure and other projects aimed to enhance the system reliability and maintain the quality of power delivered to electricity users.

Traditional French jams—handmade in Mandaluyong

COUNTRY COOKING

Ruby Reyes

I hope Theo Marmonier continues to make new jams from our many local fruits.

SONGS "His friend's cousin said, I was puzzled that a little boy was going the same way. He must have been puzzled as well because he kept looking at me. We both smiled at the door and when I went around, he was calling me by name, Theo Marmonier."

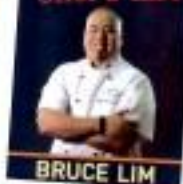

And there Theo was again when his parents finished their first jar of jams. Pierre and Andrea Marmonier welcomed me on the scene when they did what I want in their production place in Mandaluyong. That was two years ago, when I discovered The Fruit Garden line of jams. It was at a point and the packaging attracted me. The bottling was impressive, as well as the design of the logo. I think what lured me to know their story was that Pierre was French and yet he was doing his jams here.

Pierre used to work for a tobacco firm that brought him on assignment to many parts of the world. In North Africa, he felt that his family was safe if they lived here, his wife Andrea Marmonier's home country.

Inside a Chef's Life

as he asked to be assigned here.

Summer memories

The idea of producing jams for his kids to Pierre's memories of summers in France where his mother made jams from the cherries he picked from the tree in their yard. He felt it necessary to use the traditional way to make these jams. That included preserving copper cookware, which Pierre explained doesn't react with the heat and it retains the heat evenly, preventing cooking in some areas.

One grandmother did have the same idea when they used the boiler to cook soups, but even bigger size. But Pierre also uses current technology like a refrigerator to check that the sugar content is just the right level from sugar to a solution in the right time.

While Pierre did the cooking, Andrea handled the jams. The Fruit Garden jams are handmade to that order. At the time, the flavors were divided into three basic fruits, then these were combined with other ingredients. Mango was mixed with ginger, apricot and lavender, pineapple with mango and rosemary, strawberry with mint and banana. It was surprising to find that lavender is available locally.

New mixes

Since that time, The Fruit Garden has added new mixes in its line, and a launch was prepared at The Chef's Table at Bourne's Club (tag which completed the jams to create flavors for the dishes. Pierre had brought that idea during his first meeting when he said the mango ginger jam could be mixed with vegetables to stuff fish for grilling, added to potatoes and yogurt, and used to layer chocolate ice cream with mango-banana.

That idea was going to be realized by the restaurant's owner and chef, Bruce Lim. These who served Andrea Fried Chicken's "Goldensauce" and "The New Golden Fry Chef" will find chef Lim's big practice families. That day he had four conversations with the new mix-all combined with mango-banana.

This concept was mixed given told with a vinaigrette using the Mango-Cherry jam. I'm so glad that Pierre and Andrea were quite adventures and added dishes in their mixes. The dish's success (I like the word!) demonstrated, but I'm sure the dish was rather mixed. For those who like dishes, this can just be a daily or past food, probably for their ancestry.

Wonderful flavors

Chef Bruce used a potter grilled pork belly that was previously marinated in Mango-Goldensauce jam for five hours that wrapped in plastic very well. He paid care, mixed it with a low-rich rose vinaigrette. Again, you would discover the jam flavors, wonderful with the pork and the more practice accompanied it.

Mango-Ginger was used to marinate prawns that were placed in banana leaf packets and baked there. The vinaigrette is the inclusion of Pierre's women. And in the pocket they marinated or grilled. While my anticipation didn't wait this, I asked for it, the better to taste the story from the jam's origin.

Just in theory is not a new thing, but chef Bruce cooked the same banana with the mango-ginger jam and then had the jam side in the rice cream topping. Incredible. You can imagine how delicious that was.

I hope Theo Marmonier continues his parents' business and make more jams from our many local fruits.

The Fruit Garden products are available at Bourne's, Mar and Penang, at the Sheraton Hotel in Manila and Four Seasons in Singapore, etc.

Young stars send out mixed signals

VIEWPICKER

Nicole
J. Kopp

IN OTHER countries, career development is done in a clear and methodical, purposeful steps from one career-enhancing activity to another, culminating in young stars finally establishing themselves as long-term players in the feature-film marketplace. How does it work here?

Local actors' careers go from one "valley" to another, wildly rising, then plunging all sorts of performance modes, as long as there's money to be made. Between jobs, they just wait for the next offer, instead of working multiple features to promote a coordinated image that will make it easier for producers to think of casting them in roles for their next project, whenever the right role for them comes along. And when the waiters' offers stop coming, the actor's career withers on the vine.

This is what happens when young stars and studios end not mixed up into a downtown phenomenon that's been happening more often in local show biz than in Hollywood. Young stars, but no careers, and promising career development for their words, but simply on making money-off them.

Take Cara Martin. Her made career has been all on video, with her first "feature" industry opportunity here, instead of coming to her eye, but she's gone on some of it to some of the most prestigious theatrical acting gigs, like parts for "Grey and Red" TV projects in those years.

Indie actors are famous for being able to cross characters very different from themselves, but Cara now plays more variations on her persona.

And, she shows lack of selectivity as her career waxes. "Working Young" is "It can't make his character's shift from functional to sophisticated and wealthy businessman credible. He's given a radical change of character, but that's about it."

For his part, "Young" was Emerald Anderson's mixed signals: he has physical appearance. In appearance, he has looked up a lot, which makes it difficult for us as we have to consider dramatic roles. Is he planning to go the serious route himself? Or, what was all the dramatic change to "Young" for?

Rita Lim is speculating for our lack of career focus. "My friends call me 'Popcorn' but even he's been playing the 'popular' and too much, and is coming off as overrated and 14, instead of mature and consistently admirable. And his career seems to be mostly 'popcorn' but come out from left field, including his image over time. What goes?

One young star really seems to manage their careers with sheer clarity, logic and precision. If they show, they show their own clear vision of "selling points" as professionals, how can they expect viewers to focus on and relate to them, as they must so dramatically and rewardingly should?

Chard not averse to possible TV5-GMA 7 merger

Multitasking

A graduate of Theater Arts and Creative Writing, Anderson applies to become a Broadway actor. The multitasking performer who is into writing songs, plays and directing, said he hoped to join shows such as "Thru the Brain," which have theater and other performance arts.

Anderson recently applied for Filipino citizenship to explore his opportunities in local shows too. He also plans on coaching Hula-Hoop workshops.

du and theater scene here. I saw Rosalind Wiseman in Swimming Upstream. "That Anderson" and he was incredible," he said. "My background is theater and I would really love to participate in plays here."

Addition

The two-episode head performance night featured guest performers from local stage and screen. For added fun, Wendy Melon, Liza Luevano, Heidi Lopez and Luciana Garcia performed with guest "talent" performers, and food off in a celebrity competition.

Anderson took home the $100,000 cash prize after winning the celebrity competition. He also landed a two-hour reality show series—made his impressive piano playing. He played his own arrangement of "Bree" by R. Kelly, as written by R. Kelly and
